Measures promoting health and well-being throughout life

- Expanded access to health care and initiatives towards the empowerment of older persons to enjoy their rights and live with dignity.

- Awareness around healthy ageing had increased since the third review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action in 2017.

- Gaps between policies and implementation remain and have further been deepened by the COVID-19 pandemic and coverage, accessibility and affordability of certain policies directed at older persons continue to pose a challenge to promoting the health and well-being of older persons.

- Several good practices reported.

- Overall national health strategies in place. In some countries, dedicated strategies and health policies support the well-being of older persons specifically.
Ageing and health-care systems

- Improvements in universal access to health care
- In addition, various measures to improve access (overview in report)
- Challenges: barriers to access to health, health insurance for older women, lack of data and access to health-care in rural and remote areas
- Good practices supporting older persons in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic were reported

Long-term care

- Nr. of long-term care (LTC) systems have increased and expanded in the region, however, the implementation of comprehensive LTC services remains low.

- Measures include efforts to increase the quality of LTC services to older persons through enhancing integrated approaches that support health promotion and health prevention as a part of social protection or providing community-based care.

- Challenges: COVID-19 pandemic and provision of access to care for poor and homeless older persons.

- A few countries reported that their insurance scheme covered LTC.
Mental health services

- Increased efforts in the field of mental health service provision, however, specific ageing-related mental health services remain insufficient.

- Recent initiatives aimed at addressing dementia reported by some countries.

- However, more attention to mental health care in policies is needed as well as data collection, lessons learned from COVID-19 and investments in capacities.
Support to older persons with disabilities

- Many countries have taken measures to support older persons with disabilities
- A couple of examples of comprehensive measures that explicitly address the concerns of older persons with disabilities have been put in place
