Asia and the Pacific is a heterogeneous region comprising many economies, most of which base their economic growth on international trade. The global economic crisis of 2008 has opened some old questions related to limits of export-oriented growth, including in the Asian and Pacific region. In that context, stronger regional integration has been put forward as one of the alternative sources of growth. This volume on Challenges and opportunities of trade and financial integration in Asia and the Pacific looks at a selected number of concerns and possible solutions related to enhancing trade and financial integration in Asia and the Pacific. It is hoped that it will provide useful insights for both trade policy makers and researchers as well as for civil society representatives on remaining challenges and unused opportunities in integrating economies of Asia and the Pacific.

The most profound gratitude is due to the authors who contributed papers for this volume. This publication is the third volume associated with the Macao Regional Knowledge Hub (MARKHUB), an ESCAP project funded by the Government of Macao, China. The project also has benefited from contributions by two other dedicated partners, the World Trade Organization and the International Development Research Centre, Canada. The project is implemented by Ms. Mia Mikic in collaboration with other professional staff of the Trade and Investment Division under the guidance of Mr. Ravi Ratnayake Director, Trade and Investment Division. Grateful acknowledgement is due to Mr. Robert Oliver for editing this volume. Mr. Weijie Jin, an intern in the Trade and Investment Division at the time of preparing this volume, formatted the material and provided valuable research assistance. Ms. Charuwan Chongsathien undertook all administrative processing necessary for the issuance of this volume.
